School plays

track 13

Drama is usually an activity after school, but it is as important as school subjects. It helps children and young people become more confident ¹. It gives them the skills of creativity and curiosity ² that they need in their lives. They learn better speaking skills. Drama also teaches them how to understand people from all backgrounds ³ and with different points of view ⁴.

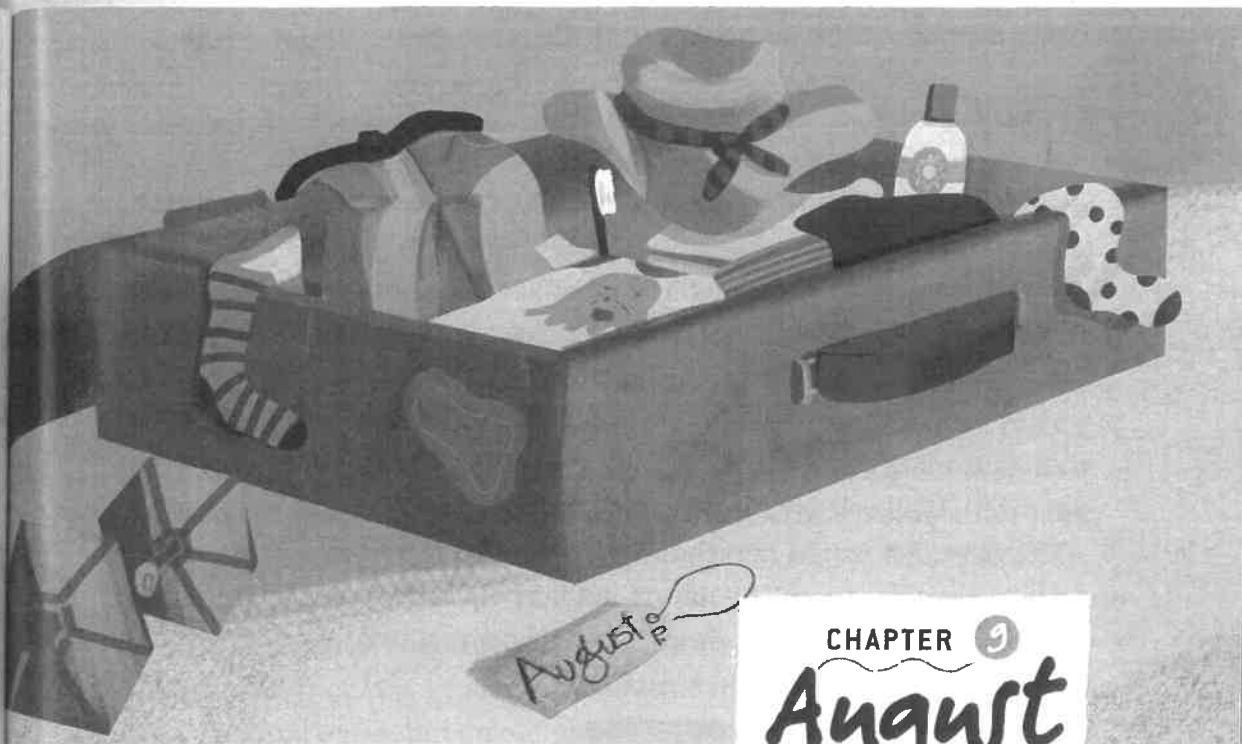

The school play is the first time many students experience the excitement of a live audience. It is fun to stand on stage and connect with people. At school the audience are full of parents and grandparents and it is exciting for students.

1. confident : positive.

2. curiosity : interest.

3. background : family and culture.

4. point of view : opinion.

CHAPTER 9 August

track 11

In the spring every year, class five goes away for three days and two nights, to a nature reserve¹. There are cabins² with bunk beds³, campfires and long walks through the woods.

I'm nervous about going away from home. Mom helps me pack.

"Your teachers are there," Mom says, "and Jack."

"We can't take cell phones," I say.

"I know," says Mom.

The next day it's dark when I wake up. I put my hearing aid on and suddenly the world is alive. I can hear the rubbish trucks and the birds in the garden. I hear Mom's alarm clock beeping.

I sit next to Jack on the bus and Summer is in front of us. Everyone is happy and I'm especially happy because Julian is not on the trip. When we get to the nature reserve, there are three bunk beds in every room.

1. nature reserve : a place where you can see animals and flowers.

2. cabin :

3. bunk beds :

In 2012 Meryl Streep won the Best Actress Award at the Oscars for her role in the film The Iron Lady. She played the title character Margaret Thatcher, the former British Prime Minister.

track 08

Meryl was smiling and thanking everyone as she came onto the stage in a beautiful gold dress. She said that when they called her name, she imagined she could hear half of America saying, "Oh, no. Oh, come on. Why? Her? Again?" Meryl looked at her friends in the audience and smiled. Then she threw her arms in the air, laughed and said:

"But. Whatever."

First, Meryl thanked Don, her husband. She did this at the beginning as she said "when you thank your husband at the end, the words get lost in the music". She told him that everything she values most¹ in life comes from him. Meryl thanked her colleagues and her friends. She said that when she looked into the audience she could see her life in front of her eyes – old friends and new friends. Friendship and the joy of making movies together is really important to her in life. She said thank you for her wonderful career.

1. everything she values most : things that are important to her.
