Nobel Peace Prize

This year, the United Nations' World Food Program got the Nobel Peace Prize.

The World Food Program is the largest humanitarian organization in the world. The organization helps people in war and conflict zones who do not have enough food. Last year, 135 million people suffered from hunger in the world, which is the highest number in history. The organization helped 100 million people in 88 countries. During the coronavirus pandemic, the situation got worse in many countries, especially in Africa.

Program officials said that the prize was for all people and companies who risk their lives to give food to people in conflict zones.

Migrants Protest

On September 9th, a refugee camp on the Greek island of Lesbos burned down. Around 13,000 people had to leave their temporary homes.

Some people started to build a new camp nearby. They were mostly people from Afghanistan, and there were many children among them. Most people, however, did not want a new camp. They wanted to leave Greece and travel to mainland Europe. These people wandered around the place, and they were angry at the situation.

Last week, some migrants started to protest. Greek officials started to build a new camp; however, migrants do not want to move in.

Building Falls down

Last week, a building fell down in India, which killed at least eight people and injured eleven others. Rescuers tried to save several people who were stuck in the ruins.

The building had only four floors; however, it was over 30 years old. It was not in good condition; however, nobody expected that it would fall down. Local authorities planned to fix the building, which did not happen because of the coronavirus.

During monsoon season, buildings fall down quite often in India. Monsoons bring heavy rains, that damage older and poorly built buildings. This season, heavy floods in eastern India affected more than 2 million people.

Coronavirus in Europe

Countries in Europe successfully slowed outbreaks of the coronavirus in spring this year. But most countries are declaring more new cases every day now than in spring. Governments are imposing new stricter rules which makes many people angry and confused. The first wave of the coronavirus hurt many people economically and mentally too.

Now it seems that there will be even more problems, and people do not like it. All across Europe, governments are closing down pubs, bars or gyms. In Madrid, the capital of Spain, people can travel in and out of the city only if it is necessary.

Experts say that governments must think carefully about new rules. It is important to keep the virus under control; however, people must understand the rules and why it is necessary to follow them.
